IT'S A BALL FOR WOMAN'S CLUB

Mickey Ball was installed as the new president of the Arcadia Woman's Club on June 6, at its historic clubhouse on First Ave. in Arcadia. It was an honor for me to serve as the installing officer. Live flowering plants were used in the ceremony.

Ball is the president of the Retired Teachers Association and past president of the Arcadia Historical Society.

Stepping down after a successful three-year term, Shirley Heimbruch received a standing ovation.

The General Federation of Woman's Clubs pins were presented to Heimbruch and the new president.

A delicious catered lunch was enjoyed, with bridge following.

Plans are underway for the annual champagne membership brunch in September.

Re: Dues to District (correction)

It was a good thing I just did not send $200.00 still due on dues that Dea Mc Creary informed you on the phone. I was intending to write and ask for the dues form back so there would be something on file of what happened.

Fortunately, the DATA form was sent back with adding machine tapes showing the amount needed to be sent is three hundred dollars.

Enclosed is what appears to be a zerox of the original form paying $375.00 with yellow highlites and the amount due to Federal written in.. I don't know if the Arcadia Club was sent an updated form showing the ten dollars change from four dollars for Federal. At any rate this (enclosed) is what Rowena asked me to to send in with the $375.00 check after getting one more signature that was missing. This I did.

Because you are President and should be kept informed of activities, and to be aware that the enclosed form is "old" so as to look for an updated form next spring, is the reason I am sending this to you and for filing.

If you feel this is all in good order now, do sent in the $300.00 additional check (enclosed with an envelope that Carol furnished) and the Arcadia Club will be in good standing.

WHAT IS A LEADER?

Some of the requirements of being a good leader are:

- Attitude: Your attitude will be conveyed to those you are leading -- is it what a leader should convey?
- Enthusiasm: This, too, is conveyed to others. You must be interested in what you are doing, and in what members of your organization are doing.
- Sold on the program: If you believe that this is good, needed and wanted, then you can sell it to others. If you do not do a good job of selling, will local organization members feel it is worthwhile?
- Know material: You must know the material you are presenting. You must be able to do what you are asking members to do. You must be able to demonstrate the techniques and skills you expect them to acquire.
- Teaching techniques: All leaders teach in some form. You must have a basic understanding of teaching techniques -- not just what, but how.
- Tolerance: To err is human. You must allow for mistakes in yourself as well as in others. Don't every try to bluff your way out of a mistake. If you are tolerant they will be also.
- Patience: Remember the first time you tried something new; the mistakes you made? Well, put yourself in the other person's place. Don't jump too soon, but be ready to help when needed. Don't expect perfection on the first try.
- Sensitivity: You must be aware of individuals, personalities, strong and weak points. You must feel what they feel, think as they think, remember what it was like to be on the other side of the fence.
- Understanding: If you understand people, individuals, their needs, reasons and methods, you will be on the road to being a good leader. Understanding takes logic, as well as emotion and feeling.
- Good Listener: How can you lead if you cannot listen? You can't.
- Humor: Humor is a basic requirement to being a good leader. It is better to be able to laugh at a mistake than to cry, and you as a leader are just as apt to make mistakes as your members. It is a proven fact that people do what they enjoy, and humor is the best avenue to use.
- Rapport: You should establish rapport with your members. Give and take is so important to successful relationships between people. Remember, you are not the boss; you are not supervising paid staff; you are leading volunteers.
- Flexibility: Every program, meeting and activity must be flexible. Plan what you are going to accomplish, but be able to adapt to a situation, a subject, a thing. You must maintain control and keep going for your goals, but be flexible.
- Evaluator: You must evaluate your members and activities, as well as yourself. You must obtain and learn the different methods of evaluating, criticizing and suggesting, and then learn what method works best with different individuals.

P A T H W A Y S

BY SHELBY P. HAMLETT, GFWC INTERNATIONAL PRESIDENT

HERE WE ARE IN 2002, A new year filled with hope, dreams, aspirations, and abiding faith that it will be a better year than the last one and that peace will reign again. There is no doubt that the cataclysmic events and tragedies of September 11th shattered our security and caused our faith to falter. I do believe, however, that from everything bad comes something good....sometimes we just have to look harder, but there is always something good.

The revival of the true spirit of patriotism in our country has been an inspiration. The courage of the many thousands of families, friends and acquaintances, as well as the military, fire, postal and rescue workers to go forth and carry on has certainly left an indelible impression. The wonderful examples they have set will provide us all with many beautiful stories of genuine heroism to share with our children and grandchildren in times to come.

Certainly the true meaning and spirit of volunteerism has risen to the top and the need to volunteer, to give back, to care for others, to provide simple services can now be seen in a new light. In many ways, September 11th has brought home to us all the interconnectedness in our country—when some among us suffer, we all suffer. With this realization comes a new spirit of community, a desire to reach out and do something.

Our GFWC clubs can provide countless opportunities for becoming involved in serving others. With the current increased need for volunteers and the heightened awareness among the many people in your area who may not have considered joining in the past, now is the perfect time for every single club to strengthen its efforts to bring in new members. Reach out and invite those who previously declined your invitation. With the new sense of urgency, they may now be ready.

This also is an excellent time to take stock of the programs and projects your club offers. Just because “we’ve always had that project” does not mean we should “always” keep it. New programs, like new ideas, generate enthusiasm and excitement. We are living in different times, times that are ripe with the need for volunteer activities in areas we may not have previously been involved.

Just as joggers and bikers feel better after a strenuous workout, volunteers feel better when they help people. There are many opportunities you, as a member, can offer that might help ease pain and suffering. And please do not overlook those whose cultural and ethnic backgrounds are different from yours. As strange as it might sound, our international neighbors do not feel as safe in America as they once did. There are many ways and opportunities to fulfill that nagging need to “do something” and to encourage participation through a GFWC club.

AUSTRALIA & NEW ZEALAND

As you are reading this article, I should be somewhere in Australia—including the Outback—or New Zealand on the GFWC Collette Tour, “From the Outback to the Glaciers.” While all of us on this trip are far away, we are representing GFWC and you will not be far from our thoughts. We will look forward to sharing our experiences with you.

2002 INTERNATIONAL GFWC CONVENTION

Plans are rolling right along for the 111th GFWC International Convention to be held in Kansas City, Missouri in June. We know you will not want to miss this one!

Please note some changes: the Board of Directors meeting will be held on Thursday, June 13. This change will accommodate the LEADS Training Seminar, in which we hope your state will have a participant. I am confident that in years to come this new initiative will result in stronger leadership for our states and GFWC. Actually, every level will benefit as those who attend share their experiences and knowledge.

The Missouri State Night Banquet will be held on Friday night, June 14, following the Day of Service. Because our first Day of Service last year in St. Paul proved to be such a huge success with enthusiastic member response, we are working hard to find a new project in Kansas City. We will keep you posted on the details as they develop. If you did not get involved last year, you will now have another chance.

WOMAN'S CLUB HAS THEIR BALL

Mickey Ball was installed for a second term as president of the Arcadia Woman's Club on June 5 at their historic clubhouse on First Ave.
